

Device offers final word, but it can't be printed

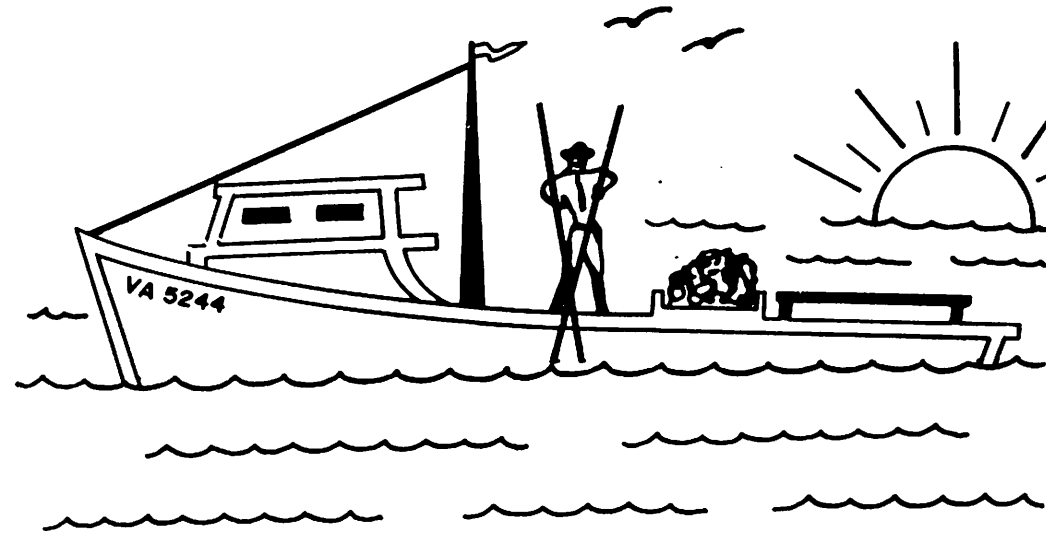

NEW YORK — The season's most popular novelty may be a pocket-size electronic voice box that, at the push of a button, spews profane insults suitable for use in locker rooms, saloons and stockbrokers' offices.

This adult toy is called the Final Word. It delivers pre-recorded obscenities in a shrill voice that sounds like an angry chipmunk from Brooklyn.

"They're flying out the door," said Joan Geisler, owner of a Greenwich Village shop, as she waited for a broker to pick up his order of 60.

The device comes in two versions, one rated "G," the other "X." The former repeats these phrases: "You're an idiot," "Drop dead," "You're a dope," and "Stupid jerk." The adult version's remarks can't be repeated in a family newspaper.
